

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a concrete column supporting an overhead load and having a base and resting on a surface, a process of strengthening the column to increase its ability to withstand atypical physical loading accompanying an earthquake, involving the steps of placing a shell including a thermoplastic sheet around the column, and filling the annular space between the sheet and the column.

PH1M107903.1